but more often they

polish trophies or finger a keyboard or guide a half chewed pencil these hands wear fuzzy mittens to sleigh rides and evening gloves at dances and charm bracelets and pastel nail polish and a class ring that's two sizes too big

they ache from washing so many dishes and babysitting for that Farrell brat and decorating for the prom and peroxidizing and doing a chemistry notebook in one night and clapping madly at the basketball game and shaking hands at commencement they ache too in june from waving goodbye to homeroom announcements and allowances and study halls and choir rehearsals and after game dances and english teachers and jokes about english teachers and

The Line-up

S E N I O R S

Dressed in cap and gown, the Senior wonders how the years—especially this last one—could have flown by so quickly. The end of twelve years of schooling has come, and soon he will be on his own to earn his living or to gain higher education. Some will leave the walls of Our School eagerly—others regretfully—and still others with an odd combination of both . . . but all will leave with the sound of the North High School Alma Mater ringing in their hearts, even as the sound of their voices will echo eternally through the halls. Each Senior—no matter how much or how little he participated in school activities, was important—oh, so very important—in the Life and Spirit of N.H.S.
